

Problem Statement:

Twitter has too many spam accounts and free speech on the platform is too limited.

Details:

Twitter has struggled with the rise of spam accounts, making genuine interactions harder to find amidst bots and automated posts. While it initially branded itself as a platform for free speech many users feel that recent changes have imposed restrictions, limiting open dialogue. This combination of spam overload and perceived censorship has led to frustration, with many questioning whether the platform can still deliver on its promise of a space for authentic, free expression.
